Short Description

Whether you are a home hoping to encourage interaction in your living room, or a center hoping to put clients at ease in the counseling room, this training will give you the tools you need to intentionally structure and design the rooms of your space to support the services offered.

Description

We intuitively know that some rooms make us feel more comfortable than others. We may attribute it to the decor, the color palate, the furniture, but how do you know what elements of the room work together to provide that feeling? In this session you'll join architect Angela Mazzi as she shares research based principles of design that have a proven impact on well being.

Whether you are a home hoping to encourage interaction in your living room, or a center hoping to put clients at ease in the counseling room, this training will give you the tools you need to intentionally structure and design the rooms of your space to support the services offered.
